PROSPECTUS OF THE Maine Farmer and Mechanics' Advocate. (NEW SERIES.) E. HOLMES, Editor. THE proprietors of the MAINE FARMER, in accordance with the suggestions of their friends, and with a view to meet the wishes of a large number of their subscribers, have come to the conclusion to make a change in the form and size of the paper, on the first of January next. It will be about double the size that it now is. They propose to issue a paper, once per week, in large folio size, to be called MAINE FARMER AND MECHANICS' ADVOCATE. One page is to be devoted exclusively to Agriculture, one to Mechanical subjects, frequently illustrated with engravings, one page to the current news of the day, with the proceedings of the Legislature and of Congress when these two bodies are in session, and the remaining page to be devoted to miscellaneous reading, poetry, advertisements, &c. They presume it is not necessary to enlarge upon the peculiar character or future course of the paper now offered to you. The Maine Farmer has been in existence nine years, steadily and perseveringly devoted to the interest of the productive classes. It will continue, as hitherto, a steady and undeviating friend to the Farmers and Mechanics; zealously urging the efforts of honest industry. Many of our best practical Farmers have long been engaged in contributing to the columns of the Farmer. These, as well as others, will continue their aid and assistance in the Agricultural portion, and we have the assurance of many excellent Mechanics that they will also contribute to the columns of their department. Terms $2 per ann. $2.50 will be charged if payment is delayed beyond the year. Any person who will obtain a responsible subscriber, and act as Agent, shall receive a copy, so long as he keeps that number good, for his services. Winthrop, Nov. 20, 1841.

PAPER, QUILLS, INK. A new article usual for sale at a Bookstore. Fresh supply received by. No. 18. E. F. DUREN.

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Maine in Legislature assembled. THE Proprietors of the Penobscot Boom Corporation respectfully represent, that they have been at great expense in erecting the Penobscot Boom, for the protection and security of the Logs which annually float down the Penobscot River. And for the protection, security and delivery of these Logs to the rightful owners and claimants, your petitioners are at a great annual expense. To protect the interest and meet the convenience of the public, large sums of money must necessarily be annually appropriated by the proprietors to defray the expenses of the Booms. For the encouragement of the Proprietors to enable them to meet their appropriations and expenses and to put the Booms annually in a condition to meet the wants and convenience of the public, your petitioners would humbly pray that they may be allowed a fair, reasonable and adequate toll or bounties upon the Lumber which is annually floated and protected in their Booms, and that they may have a sufficient lien upon the Lumber to secure the payment of such Bounties and other expenses and that the Legislature in their wisdom will adopt such regulations as to Toll and Bounties as shall be for the mutual benefit of your petitioners and those whose Lumber they secure and protect, and who in duty bound will ever pray. EAMUEL VEAZIE, Agent of said Corporation. Bangor, Jan. 1, 1842. 110w1w

New READING BOOK for Schools.

THE MONITORIAL READER, or a Monitor to Youth, holding up to their view Models whereby to form their own Characters. By DANIEL ADAMS, Author of Adams's New Arithmetic.

EXTRACTS FROM THE PREFACE. "THE MONITORIAL READER possesses distinctive traits. The object is to supply what is believed to be the great desideratum, in our schools, a series of exercises relating to what concerns the practical matters of life, truth, integrity, honesty, industry, temperance, forethought, frugality, patient endurance of adversity, and whatever else tends to form and fix the character of youth. We wish to impress it on the minds of those, into whose hands these exercises shall come, now, in this seed-time of life, what is here so abundantly inculcated, that 'Every man is emphatically the architect of his own future,' that with themselves it lies whether they shall ever be any thing or nothing that a monied capital to begin with does not weigh a whit in the balance for or against them, that, coming into life with health, strength, capacity for labor, good education, a useful and respectable trade, habits of industry, sobriety, punctuality, frugality, and, above all, with a GOOD AND UNSULLIED CHARACTER, they have the best of all capital, a moral capital, the noblest of all power, moral power; and the most certain means of honest and honorable accumulation and fortune, and may be sure, under circumstances ordinarily propitious, to rise to that competency of influence, respect, and general confidence, and that honorable measure of wealth and independence, which should fully satisfy a reasonable and virtuous ambition."

EXTRACTS FROM RECOMMENDATIONS. The influence will all be found on the side of virtue, morality and religion. Occasional comments are given. Difficult or unusual words are defined. Prose and poetry are suitably intermingled. It is hardly to be imagined that this book should fail of popularity. It certainly would not, had it not so many competitors that have got the start of it in the race. As it is, its motto is such as to give it fair promise of ultimate success in the contest. Boston Recorder.

Dr. Adams: Having examined to some extent your Monitorial Reader, I am pleased with its plan, its object, and the manner in which it has been executed. It seems adapted to the intellectual and moral improvement of those for whose use it was designed. I trust it will prove to be what its author fondly anticipates. (Rev.) Z. S. BARSTOW, Keene.

It is just such a book as our New England boys and girls will be glad to see, for it inculcates in a pleasing manner, industry, frugality, truth, honesty, temperance, peace, kindness, fortitude, and a cheerful piety. The Vocabulary, at the end, and the arrangement for defining words, will add to its value in the hands of a judicious teacher. (Rev.) ABEL A. LIVERMORE, Keene.

We have also recommendations from a number of individuals and periodicals, among which are D. Crosby, Preceptor of the High School Nashua; J. Newton Brown, Professor of Theology at New Hampton. It is also adopted by the Associations of School Teachers in Cheshire and Hillsboro' counties, and by the School Committee of Concord. About 6000 copies have been published, and most likely disposed of. Published and for sale by ROBY, KIMBALL & MERRILL, North End, Main Street, Concord, N. H. For sale by the Booksellers in Portland, Hallowell, Augusta, Bangor, Waterville, Gardiner, Belfast and Eastport, Me. October 13. enw3m

HUMAN HAIR. CLEANLINESS OF THE HEAD AND HAIR. STRANGE it is that persons who attend strictly to personal cleanliness, baths, &c. should neglect the Head, the Hair the most essential the most exposed and the most beautiful when properly cared for, of all the gifts of the Creator. Perfectly free may it be kept of dandruff or scurf with a certainty that the hair cannot fall out, by the use of the Balm of Columbia. Ladies, will you make your toilet without this article? I answer fearlessly, No, if you have once tried and experienced its purifying effects, its sweet perfume. A hundred articles have been put forth on the credit of this, the only first the only really valuable article. A mass of testimony from all classes to these facts. LOOK OUT! Counterfeits are abroad; look always for the name of COMSTOCK & Co. on the splendid wrappers, and never buy it without that name. [From the Boston Chronicle, Jan. 10.]

We see by an advertisement in another column that Messrs. Comstock & Co., the Agents for Oldridge's Balm of Columbia, have deputies to sell that article in Boston and elsewhere. We know a lady of this city whose hair was so nearly gone as to expose entirely her phenomenal developments, which, considering that they betokened a most amiable disposition; was not in reality very unfortunate. Nevertheless she mourned the loss of locks that she had worn, and, after a year's fruitless resort to mis-called restoratives, purchased, some months ago, a bottle or two of Oldridge's Balm, and she has now ringlets in rich profusion, glossy, and of rare blackness. We are not putting none of the commodity has been sent to us, and, indeed, we do not want any, for though we were obliged to wear a wig a year ago, we have now, through its virtue, hair enough, and of a passable quality, of our own. Daring Fraud.

The Balm of Columbia has been imitated by a notorious counterfeiter. Let it never be purchased or used unless it have the signature of COMSTOCK & Co. on a splendid wrapper. This is the only external test that will secure the public from deception. Address COMSTOCK & Co., Wholesale Druggists, New York, 71 Maiden Lane. [For sale by G. W. LADD, corner of Smith's Block, A. Post-Office Advertising.

The Belfast Journal, a loco-foco paper, and of course, pretty good authority for the Post Master in this city, in speaking of the subject of advertising the list of letters, thus very justly remarks:

"We observe that Post-masters in some of our cities are obeying the Post Office regulation, by giving the publication of the letters to papers of the greatest circulation, without regard to their political character. It is an injustice to the people, unjust in itself and a violation of Post Office laws, to publish in papers of inferior circulation the lists of letters."

The injustice to the people and the injustice per se, has been practised by the local party for several years, all over the country, and in some cases by the order of the Post Master General to sustain the party. Nor is this all for, in this city, this has not only been the case, but the Post Master here, although retained in office, continues the same injustice, by publishing the list of letters remaining in the Post Office in his favorite party paper, although of inferior circulation.

By insisting upon the same measures being adopted in behalf of party now, that was practiced under the late administrations, the Whig papers should have all the Post Office advertising. But this, although a change, would not be a reform. We wish for a reform. We are willing that justice should be done the public, instead of having public justice sacrificed to party interests.

The Kennebec Journal states, that the Post Master of Augusta, was asked why he did not advertise in the Kennebec Journal, which has the greatest circulation. He replied that the matter was not left to his discretion; that he had orders from the Post Master General to advertise in the Age, and he does to this day advertise in the Age, under an order thus specially and privately issued in violation of the general order of the Department.

We wish this fact made known to the present Post Master General, that he may at once rescind all such orders issued for party ends, and allow all Post Masters to conform to a general rule, if there be one, and one there should be, or else to act according to their discretion. The public convenience has, in this matter, quite long enough, been sacrificed to the interests of the few, and we may as well rake open the matter, and have it corrected now as at any future time. If our Post Master has any good and sufficient reason to give why he continues to advertise in the paper having the smallest circulation among the people for whose benefit the publication is made, we shall willingly and even cheerfully submit. But, in the absence of such reason, we think a continuance of the practice is a direct insult to the people of Bangor.

City Affairs.

The Collector made his return of collections for 1841, $13,381.88.
Balance uncollected $2,642.69.
Discharged and admitted members to the several Engine Companies. Report of the committee on accounts on several bills; accepted and sent down for concurrence Adj.

In the Common Council there was not a quorum present and the board adjourned to meet on Wednesday evening next at seven o'clock.

Charles Dickens, in behalf of the passengers of the Britannia during her last voyage on Saturday last presented Capt. Hewitt several pieces of plate as a testimony to the skill and gentlemanly conduct of that gentleman during the passage. The address was delivered at the Tremont House, Boston, and was very neat.

A Western paper announces the issue of a proclamation by Joseph Smith, the Mormon, directing the Mormons of Illinois to vote for the opposition or anti-Whig candidate for Gov. and Lieut. Governor.

It is now said that the loss sustained by the Eastern Railroad Corporation in the burning of the depot building at East Boston, does not exceed $17,000.

We had a smart warm rain yesterday that has carried off nearly all the snow in this vicinity. This morning the weather is quite like spring.

The Philadelphians now begin to grumble out their fears that the crop of 'Ice will fail. The weather there is very moderate.

There is a man in Hingham whose hearing is so hard that he breaks it up, and sells it for gun flint.

It now takes only as many weeks to go from England to the East Indies as it occupied months some years ago, to perform the journey.

The Free Suffrage Convention of Rhode Island has issued a Proclamation declaring the Constitution, formed by it the supreme law of the State, and as such to be obeyed, respected, and defended by all necessary means. The old Government, composed of a Governor, Legislature, &c. chosen by the Freeholders, refuse to recognize it. There is danger of trouble here.

Large Meetings of the friends of Protection to American Labor have recently been held in Cincinnati and other towns of Ohio; also in N. Haven, Conn. The People are arousing to the importance of countervailing the exactions of Foreign Aristocracy and the depression of wages caused by Foreign Pauperism.

A Cherokee Indian, named Moses Albert, or Albany, Jr. who recently murdered Geo. Long, a white man, has been arrested, and delivered up to be tried by the U. S. District Court.

The Elder Knapp Excitement--Dickens, alias "Boz," Mrs. Abigail Folsom--The Boston Ladies' Theatre--Washingtonians, and so forth.

Boston, Jan. 27, 1842.

The excitement in relation to Elder Knapp is fast subsiding, and with it his audiences decrease. The calling out of the "National Lancers," a splendid corps of mounted men, although intended for good, but aggravated the evil which called loudly for abatement. Scores came out for no other purpose than to get a sight of them citizens of the neighboring towns as well as those of the city. The assemblages which nightly besieged the church where the Elder held forth, shew no disposition to harm the man, or to deface the church, with, perhaps, a few exceptions. His denunciatory language, and discourtesy towards other sects, were the cause of the tumult, and not that he preached plainly those doctrines peculiar to the Baptist denomination. His tone is said to be now somewhat modified, and to partake less of that heated and brawling spirit to be met with at political meetings, and bar-room harangues. Dr. Sharp still holds out in his opposition to Elder Knapp, and Mr. Hague, pastor of the Federal-street Baptist church, has come to his rescue. I understand that the former has received many substantial tokens of the approbation of his friends. The news boys have had excellent sport during the Knapp excitement, in reaping a harvest from the sale of papers and pamphlets. "Here's the expose of Elder Knapp," and "Here's the Times all about Elder Knapp only one cent," were constantly dinging in our ears, from Monday morning to Saturday night. I hope never to witness a similar excitement. Ministers of the gospel, above all men, should so conduct themselves, as not to outrage decency, and bring about their devoted heads, needlessly, the storm of public indignation.

Charles Dickens, Esq. alias "Boz," as you will have heard before this reaches you, is now here. A complimentary dinner is to be given him next week. He is decidedly a good looking fellow wears long hair, and is of course the "lion" of the city. The Earl of Mulgrave is entirely eclipsed by him. It is stated that the tickets to the "Boz dinner," are to be put at the moderate price of ten dollars, and I make no doubt the company will be sufficiently select. Mr. Dickens is a pleasing writer, and I have no doubt is an amiable man, but I question the propriety of feasting any man or set of men. There are a thousand as good men as Dickens in Boston, and probably double that number--men who are in all respects his equals, if not his superiors. If they visit England, are they feasted, and worshipped? No. And here the people of that country shew their good sense. Let us receive distinguished strangers with cordiality and a hearty yankee greeting, and with all those little civilities which should characterize the meeting of friendly strangers, but at the same time eschew all that foolish and disgusting parade, which is but too common at the present day. Besides, I am so much of a republican, that I would not sooner honor a lord, a duke, a prince, or a literary man, than I would a mechanic who had become famous in his calling. A skillful engineer, or cordwainer, if he is a gentleman, is as deserving of homage, (and frequently more so,) as a representative of the aristocracy, or of the literature of a country. However, as I shall not attend the ten dollar fete, I will say nothing more.

The famous Mrs. Abigail Folsom took the floor again yesterday at the Melodeon, at which place there was a meeting of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, and spoke about three quarters of an hour. In order to get rid of her, the meeting was compelled to adjourn; their non-resistant principles preventing any interference in order to silence her. Abigail is certainly a queer specimen of feminine humanity. She has talents, but no reason to guide them aright.

The Charlestown Navy Yard now presents quite an unusual scene of activity. The carpenters and caulkers are busily engaged in finishing the frigate Cumberland, and in getting out timber for a new vessel. The Cumberland will probably be ready to glide into the briny element in a few months. She is a first class frigate, and I should pronounce her a fine model of a craft. The following vessels are now at the Navy Yard and in our harbor. The ships of the line, Ohio, Columbus, Virginia, and Vermont, the two latter on the stocks; frigates Columbia, and Cumberland, the former is attached to the Home Squadron, and is delayed here for the lack of men, or for something else; sloop-of-war John Adams, ready for sea, and waiting orders; store ship Eric, formerly sloop of war; schr. Grampus, ready for sea, and waiting orders, and the little brig Apprentice, hauled up in the wharf. So you see we have here quite a fleet of Uncle Sam's vessels some in the water and some on the stocks, waiting for the finishing stroke of the workmen. The Vermont and Virginia, should be finished immediately, as they are rapidly decaying.

You will pardon me, I know, if I just allude to the Boston ladies. If I am a bachelor, and a confirmed one, this is a free country, and I claim the liberty to speak of the ladies, as well as of men and things. Well, what I am going to say, is, that the Boston girls need not pout and curl the lip at the down east girls, as they as well as the gentlemen frequently do, for I positively assert that a jury of twelve impartial men, would bring in a verdict without leaving their seats, in favor of your down east girls. A pretty girl in Boston is as rare, as are such horses for speed and bottom, as your friend Stickland drove while on his ever to be remembered retreat. You must excuse the coming rain. If you meet a beauty in promenading up and down Washington street, ten chances to one she is from the east. Beauty, I mean female beauty, in Boston is a scarce article. We have an abundance of fine feathers, but few beautiful birds. But then beauty is not every thing. The Boston ladies are amiable and accomplished, and no doubt, with some exceptions, would make good wives if they are disposed to make the trial. Of late, there has not been much stir in the matrimonial market, but there are strong indications in some quarters of an improvement. People get married for "better or for worse," but I query whether it is not the most often for the "worse." Verbum sat. A word to the wise is sufficient.

The two Theatres, Tremont and National, are not at this time very well patronised and are in what I call rather "bad sledding." By the way of sledding, I will state, we have none at all as yet. There is not a particle of snow now on the ground, and there is no prospect that we shall have any at present. The weather is mild, and unusually pleasant for this season of the year. How are you off for sleighing?

The Washingtonians are to have a splendid parade here on the 22d proximo. They will come out in such numbers as to make the rumblers tremble. Many of the grog-shops here have lost nearly all their customers. One of the Washingtonians has recently been appointed city crier, an office worth $1500 per annum. A year ago this man, according to his own confession, was a most miserable, loathsome sot. Behold the change. Well may this man exclaim: "O sacred pledge! how safe! how sure! To let the drunkard's cup alone!"

PORPHYRY.

[From an Occasional Correspondent.]

State House, Augusta, }
THURSDAY, Jan. 27, 1842. }

Amidst the exciting scenes of the last three weeks, events, which, at other times, and when the public mind was in a more tranquil and serene state, would be calculated to make deep and lasting impressions, have been suffered to pass by unheeded and almost entirely unnoticed. Such have been the high-handed, summary proceedings of the new powers, that the spectators have been struck with awe and astonishment. So terrible and indiscriminate has been the slaughter of office-holders, that scarcely one has survived to write the epitaph of his fellows. One poor victim, to be sure, more fortunate than the rest, whose fate has enlisted the sympathy of a favorite of the muses, is thus immortalized.

"Stranger, stand lightly if you please,
Here lies poor Ned,
Killed quite dead,
By mother Longley's great sage cheese."

Yes, reader! he has gone; his fate, though the common lot of all those who were and are not, is calculated to awaken the most poignant emotions of sorrow and regret. How many can testify with what a winning grace he conducted all those who had business with "his Excellency," to the Ante-Chamber. His had been the enviable privilege of communicating the first intelligence to the recipients of executive favor; and his the sad duty also of announcing the melancholy result to those who had been less fortunate. Poor fellow! he has gone the last sad resting place of the generous Neddy, is beneath the "great sage cheese of mother Longley." He reposes near the same spot where hosts of other poor whigs lie. The purring waters of Locofocoism, as they ripple along, and mingle their music with the notes of thousand insects who swarm around the sacred spot, will chant through all time the sad requiem of him who thus fell a victim to the demon cheese. No marble slab yet marks the spot where lie the remains of the noble, the honorable, and the true. Alas! poor Ned, posterity will know thee only as the recital of thy many virtues is handed down from generation to generation; peace to thy ashes, and may thy sad fate prove a lesson to all succeeding Messengers. Repose in peace until that hour, when all true whigs will be again called to the polls; and then thou wilt come forth with renewed vigor and energy and indeed with the immortality of "Mother Longley's great sage cheese."

BESIDES.

CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, THURSDAY, Jan. 27.

In the House to day, the first question being that resulting from the point of order heretofore made by Mr. Adams that the House had no right to entertain the resolution concerning him (Mr. A.) was taken, and, after much confusion of the Members and the Speaker as to its precise nature, being decided that it was the question of consideration, was carried: Yeas 118, Nays 75.

Thus the House determined to consider the resolution offered by Mr. Marshall, of censure of Mr. Adams.

Mr. Adams said he would now take the first moment to demand in his trial the benefits of the fifth article amendatory of the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. Underwood then spoke at length, contending that the House had no right, and that it was unconstitutional to entertain this resolution, as it charged Mr. Adams with crimes over which they had no jurisdiction.

Mr. Bots briefly defended Mr. Adams, contending that his motives were pure.

Mr. Arnold went into a spirited defence of Mr. Adams.

He deprecated the want of freedom of debate, and stated that on Saturday last, Mr. Dawson had come to him in the House threatening that he did not stop his cries of order to cut his throat!

The House at a late hour adjourned.

In the Senate, petitions were presented on the subject of the Bankrupt Law, principally against its repeal, also for other purposes.

Mr. Simmons presented resolutions of the Legislature of Rhode Island for the postponement of the Bankrupt Law for one year.

Several communications from various Departments were laid before the Senate, relative to their expenses for 1840, accounts, &c.

The bill to repeal the Bankrupt Law was debated by Mr. Bayard, who advocated it, contending that the law was unconstitutional, partaking more of the character of an insolvent than a Bankrupt Act; and by Mr. Choate, who contended that it was constitutionally, politically and morally right, and who, while a great portion of the people were weighed down with an oppressive burden of debt, while danger threatened us from abroad, and while, from discordant councils, Congress had neglected to provide the necessary pecuniary resources of relief, would rejoice to hear on the first of February the sound of the silver trumpet, proclaiming deliverance to the captive throughout the land; and by Mr. Benton, who said the law was an insolvent law, enacted for the abolition of debts, for the plunder of the country, and whose operation would be a mockery on the forms of justice.

Without concluding, he gave way, and the Senate adjourned.

Extraordinary Hed Ridden Mechanic.
In the town of Ayr, in Scotland, there lately lived a man of much provincial celebrity, of the name of James Sandy. The originality of genius and eccentricity of character which distinguished this remarkable person have been rarely surpassed.

Deprived at an early age of the use of his legs, he contrived by dint of ingenuity not only to pass his time agreeably, but to render himself a useful member of society. He soon displayed a taste for mechanical pursuits, and contrived as a workshop for his operation a sort of circular bed, the sides of which being raised about 18 inches above the clothes, were employed as a platform for turning lathes, table vices, for tools of all kinds. His genius for practical mechanics was universal. He was skilled in all sorts of turning, and constructed several very curious lathes, as well as clocks and musical instruments of every description, no less admired for the sweetness of their tone and the elegance of their execution. He excelled, too, in constructing optical instruments, and made some reflecting telescopes, the specula of which were not inferior to those finished by the most eminent London artists. He suggested some important improvements in the machinery for spinning flax; and, we believe, he was the first who made the wooden jointed snuff-boxes, generally called Laurence kirk boxes, some of which fabricated by this self-taught artist were purchased and sent as presents to the Royal Family.

To his other endowments, he added an accurate knowledge of drawing and engraving, and in both of these arts produced specimens of the highest excellence. For upwards of fifty years he quitted his bed only three times, and on those occasions his house was either inundated with water or threatened with danger from fire. His curiosity, which was unbounded, prompted him to hatch different kinds of bird's eggs by the natural warmth of his body, and he afterwards raised the motly brood with all the tenderness of a parent; so that on visiting him it was no unusual thing, to see various singing birds, to which he may be said to have given birth, perched on his head, and warbling the artificial notes he had taught them. Naturally possessed of a good constitution, and an active, cheerful turn of mind, his house was the general office room of the village, where the affairs of both church and State were discussed with the utmost freedom. In consequence of long confinement, his countenance had rather a sickly cast, but it was remarkably expressive, and would have afforded a fine subject for the pencil of Wilkie, particularly when he was surrounded by his country friends. This singular man had acquired by his ingenuity and industry an honorable independence, and died possessed of considerable property. He married about three weeks before his death.

From this brief history of James Sandy, we may learn this very instructive lesson, that no difficulties are too great to be overcome by industry and perseverance, and that genius though it should some times miss the distinction it deserves, will seldom fail, unless by its own fault, to secure competency and respectability.

Oxford Sausages.

The following recipe for making the celebrated Oxford Sausages, so much desiderated by the lovers of good eating in England, is from a late English publication. Now is the time to try it here:

Ingredients: One pound and a half of pig meat cut from the griskins without any skin, and a half pound of veal. One pound and a half of beef suet, the yolks and whites of five eggs. A dessert spoonful of sifted sage, after being well dried. Pepper and salt to taste.

Mode of making the above into Sausages: Chop the meat into small pieces and then pound it together in a marble mortar till it is short and tender.

Chop the suet very fine, and when the eggs are well beaten together, after the white specks are taken out, pour the liquid over the pounded meat and chopped suet, well kneading it together with a clean hand, throwing in the sifted sage and pepper and salt from a coarsish pepper box during the operation, so as to let them impregnate the whole mass without being predominant in any part of it.

Press the whole when well mixed together into a wide mouthed jar, and keep it from the air in a cold place.

Roll the sausages on a flax board and use very little grease in frying them, as they will be almost fat enough to fry themselves with the aid of a frying pan.

Coughs, Colds, &c.
The whole community seem to be afflicted with severe colds and distressing coughs, which is natural enough at this season of the year. We ourselves have suffered for a few days with a bad cold; but happening to be passing that way, we called in at 79 Fulton street, and purchased some Compound Broast Candy, prepared by William Brown of Boston. This candy, by using it for several consecutive days, entirely removed our cold, and thoroughly renewed our system. It is composed of a great variety of vegetable materials, many of which are used separately for the cure of colds. This valuable candy is for sale at A. B. & S. Davis, No. 79 and 100 Fulton street. Call and try it for yourselves.
